From the County Executive

Dear Westchester County Seniors,

Thank you for reading “At the Crossroads,” a directory of residential and health care facility options for Westchester County seniors who can no longer live at home. Inside, you will find useful information on a variety of care options such as adult homes, assisted living facilities, enriched housing and retirement residences.

This directory should serve as a valuable resource for seniors, families and caregivers who have come to a ‘crossroad,’ and need help making future living arrangements for themselves or their loved ones due to illness, injury or frailty of old age. It also contains information on determining the appropriate level of care, financial aspects and assistance programs.

I hope you will find this information helpful, and feel encouraged to take advantage of the many services available to seniors living in Westchester County. Thank you.

Who We Are

The Older Americans Act of 1965 created structures at the federal, state and local levels to administer programs that help the elderly maintain their health and independence in their homes and communities.

The Westchester County Department of Senior Programs and Services is part of this National Network on Aging, which includes the Administration on Aging in the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, 57 State Agencies on Aging, 670 Area Agencies on Aging and approximately 27,000 local service provider organizations under contract to the area agencies.

In 1974, the Westchester County Office for the Aging was designated by the New York State Office for Aging as the Area Agency on Aging to serve all persons 60 years of age and older in the Westchester area. In March 2001, the Westchester County Office for the Aging became the Westchester County Department of Senior Programs and Services.

Our Mission

The mission of the Westchester County Department of Senior Programs and Services is to identify and prioritize the needs of the elderly in the County; create comprehensive and coordinated plans for meeting those needs; advocate for responsive policies, programs, actions, legislation and resources on behalf of the elderly, and to administer programs under the federal Older Americans Act, the New York State Community Services for the Elderly Act and other federal, state and county funded programs and services for the elderly.

Foreword

This directory is intended to help individuals who feel they can no longer continue to live at home. It is also for families who must make decisions about future living arrangements for loved ones.

There are many choices available and this directory defines existing care options. Some are:

Nursing Home/Residential Health-Care Facilities: any type of institution providing residential nursing and rehabilitative care to the frail elderly

Adult Homes: offer less medical care and supervision

Enriched Housing Program: community-based living with personal care and congregate meals

Retirement Residences: independent living with limited or no medical access

Assisted Living: independent living with personal care services

This directory is designed to help you determine the right level of care and suggest the necessary steps to evaluate the condition and circumstances of the individual.

In the section titled Tips for Selecting a Health-Care Facility, questions are outlined that should be asked in the selection of a home or facility. This is followed by a section called What About Costs? This section explains possible financial benefits, as well as assistance programs.

Inclusion in this directory of agencies and facilities does not mean endorsement by the Westchester County Department of Senior Programs and Services, nor does omission mean disapproval. A careful and thoughtful reading of the text and personal investigation of facilities is recommended before any decisions are reached.

Care Options:

Remaining at Home

You are at the crossroads, thinking about the possibility of making a change in lifestyle because of illness, injury or the increasing frailty of age. The first question to ask is: Is a special facility or institution really needed?

As long as an older person is mentally and physically able to cope with daily activities, or needs just a little help, he or she should not live in an institutional facility. Whenever possible, it is preferable to provide health care and other support services in the home, or in the least restrictive environment as possible while remaining safe. People are happier in the familiar and comfortable setting of their own homes.

There are two types of home-care services approved by the New York State Health Department:

Certified Home-Health Agencies — offer a variety of health-care services to individuals in their own homes, generally when short-term care is needed. Such services include nursing, home health aide assistance, physical, occupational and speech therapy, nutrition counseling and medical social services.

Long-Term Home Health Care Program is an alternative to institutional facilities, designed to coordinate health care and social services for persons with long-term needs and medical conditions traditionally treated in a nursing home.

Other community-based services that could help keep an elderly or ill person at home include home-delivered meals, personal care, adult day care, transportation and escort services, telephone reassurance, volunteer visits and family respite.

For more information on home care services and other alternatives, contact the Westchester County Department of Senior Programs and Services Call Center and speak with a counselor about NY Connects: Westchester County Choices for Long Term Care (914) 813-6300.

Going To a Residential Care Facility

For those who are unable to remain at home, there are five types of residential care options that should be considered.

(1) Enriched Housing Program: For those capable of living in community-based housing but in need of moderate personal care and supportive services.

(2) Retirement Residences: For those in good health, still active and able to live independently.

(3) Assisted Living: For those having moderately good health and independent capabilities but need personal care services.

(4) Adult Homes: For those in need of supervised residential care.

(5) Residential Health-Care Facility (Nursing Home): For those needing various levels of skilled nursing care.

Determining the Right Level of Care

Discussion: Assess the situation, including if possible, the person involved, family members, the doctor and the hospital social worker if the person is hospitalized. If the person is not hospitalized, advice and counseling are available from many social service agencies that offer case management programs.

Evaluation: Determine the person's present and potential capacities for self-maintenance. Both physical and mental evaluations are necessary. This information must be documented on a Patient Review Instrument (P.R.I.).

P.R.I. Form: This form is used as a guideline to determine the nursing requirements of a patient as well as appropriate placement. The P.R.I. score indicates whether an individual requires a skilled nursing facility or an adult home (residential care). Copies of this form are required by all health care facilities and must be received before an admissions determination can be made. This form must be updated every 90 days until placement is accomplished.

How do you obtain a P.R.I. evaluation?

In a Hospital - An evaluation by the doctor, nursing staff and social service department staff is recommended so that it can be determined if, upon discharge, the patient will be able to return home or must make other plans. If it is apparent that a person's needs cannot be met at home, a New York State P.R.I. form can be obtained and filled out by hospital staff.

In the Home - Consult the family doctor or call one of the visiting nurse services or public health department. A qualified person will be sent to the home to make an evaluation and provide and complete the P.R.I. form.

Tips for Selecting a Care Facility

After the steps are taken to determine which level of care is appropriate - and after the financial situation including income, assets, benefits and assistance plans is evaluated - use as many of the following steps as possible to help decide which is the home or facility that will best match the individual's needs.

1. Consider the Location: There is an advantage to having a person near his or her home community, family and friends, since visitors are vital. Therefore, distance, travel time, and transportation can be important factors. Choose the kind of environment (urban, suburban, rural), type of setting and building that will be most comfortable for the person involved.

2. Visits: Personal visits to homes or facilities are a "must," preferably with the person involved. Only by visiting can one evaluate if a home or facility is appropriate. Try to meet the administrator and other staff such as head nurse, social worker and program persons.

3. Ask For: Request any available literature and the financial arrangements including down payments, special charges and whether the home or facility will accept SSI or Medicaid after an individual's personal assets are used up.

4. Look For:

a) Atmosphere: Is it institutional or home-like? Over-organized or dull? Do the patients or residents appear content and on comfortable terms with the staff?

b) Special Services: Does the facility provide the medical care, therapy or treatment needed for the person? Are treatment or therapy rooms in use? Are dietary restrictions observed? Is the food appealing? Are there staff and residents who speak the person's language? Are religious services appropriate and adequate? Is there community involvement, a volunteer program or ombudsman so that people from outside the home or facility can see how things are going?

c) Accommodations: Is there an area for privacy? A library? Chapel? Usable outside space such as patios and walks? Is there an elevator? Are the rooms large and light? Is the building well maintained? Are there any odors? Are dining accommodations attractive? Are the bathrooms clean and in order?

d) Care: Does there seem to be enough staff? Is the staff actively working with the residents or patients? Helping them walk? Eat? Are the patients or residents receiving attention? Are their requests and preferences being met? If it becomes necessary to move a person because of a change in health, are appropriate facilities nearby or attached?

e) Other Residents or Patients: Will others in the facility be congenial and friendly? Do they seem alert, responsive? Are they clean if they are not able to care for themselves? Are they up and about or sitting in the lounges watching television or lying in bed in their rooms? How are they grouped if the facility is large?

f) Recreation Program: How many hours per week does the staff recreation person work? Is there an event calendar on display? Are there extra recreation facilities? Will the program offered match the individual's interest? Are there social hours, parties, trips? How often?

5. Check References: Try to do some research on the facility in question. Although professional agencies will not offer judgments, volunteers or friends and family members of residents may give some insight into the strengths and weaknesses of different facilities.

6. Visit More Than One: Try to visit at least three different places in the same category. First, because visiting a home or facility for the first time may be difficult and details may be overlooked. Second, because comparison of the differences will add to the information necessary to make a better decision.

7. Use the internet as a research tool:

Nursing homes vary in the quality of care and services they provide to their residents. Reviewing health inspection results, staffing data, and quality measure data are three important ways to measure nursing home quality. This information gives you a "snap shot" of the care individual nursing homes give.

Keep Visiting on a Regular Basis!

If a member of your family requires nursing care, the most valuable contribution to their successful adjustment to a new environment is to constantly stay in contact. Warm and loving support and a constant eye for his or her comfort and well-being are essential. Even if your loved one no longer recognizes you, they will enjoy your company, and you can keep an eye on their well-being.

What about Costs?

Possible Financial Benefits and Assistance Programs

For In-Home Services - Individuals may:

1. Meet the costs of the services from income, assets or health insurance programs;
2. Be eligible for a lowered fee scale (sliding scale), from local county programs and a few non profit home-care agencies, according to financial need;
3. In some instances have the costs met by the Medicare* (Part A-Hospital Insurance) program of Social Security;
4. Be eligible (or become eligible) for Medicaid long term care which covers most home health-care services including homemaker, home nursing and home health-aide services if the doctor says these are needed. Medicaid pays the approved cost of physicians, dentists, hospitals, x-ray and lab services, outpatient or clinic services, podiatry, optometry, chiropractic, home care and psychiatric services, as well as for drugs, eye glasses, hearing aids and sick room supplies. Medicaid will also pay for the cost of approved transportation services.
5. You may want to talk with a private eldercare attorney on the best way to fund needed long term care. You can contact the Westchester County Department of Senior Program and Services call center for a listing of private eldercare attorney's.

Remember - governmental assistance programs such as Supplemental Security Income and Medicaid will pay the cost of keeping an individual in his or her home, as well as for residential or health care facilities services.

For Adult Homes - Individuals may:

1. Meet the costs of the service from their income or assets;
2. Be eligible for Supplemental Security Income* (SSI) which pays a special rate to these homes plus an allowance to the individual.

For Enriched Housing Programs-Individuals may:

1. Meet the cost of service from their income and assets;
2. Be eligible for SSI

For Retirement Residences and Assisted Living - Individuals may:

1. Meet the costs from their income or assets.

For Residential Health-Care Facilities (Nursing Homes) - Individuals may:

1. Meet the costs from their income, assets or long-term health care insurance.
2. Be eligible for Medicaid* which covers costs.

*Contact the Westchester County Department of Senior Programs and Services Call Center for more information (914) 813-6300.

Patient's Rights

The following is a condensed version of Patients' Rights established in 1964 in compliance with Title VI of the Civil Rights Act, which requires the administration of each facility to draw up written policies of its responsibilities to the patient.

These rights should be posted publicly in the facility and issued to a patient upon admission to any facility.

Each patient:

1. Is to be fully informed of these rights prior to or at time of admission.
2. Is to be fully informed prior to, or at time of admission, of services available in the facility or any changes in the charges.
3. Is to be fully informed of his medical condition and allowed to participate in the planning of his medical treatment and to refuse to submit to medical research.
4. Is to be transferred or discharged only for medical reasons, or for his welfare or that of other patients, or for non-payment for stay. He shall be given reasonable advance notice.
5. Is encouraged and assisted to exercise rights and voice grievances free from restraint or reprisal. (Many patients' committees are now being formed for this purpose.)
6. May manage his personal finances or is given at least a quarterly accounting of financial transactions.
7. Is to be free from mental and physical abuse, and free from chemical and (except in emergencies) physical restraints, except on physician's orders or to prevent injury to himself or others.
8. Is assured confidential treatment of his personal and medical records.
9. Is treated with consideration, respect and full recognition of his dignity and individuality, including privacy in treatment.
10. Is not required to perform services for the facility.
11. May communicate with persons of his choice, send and receive personal mail unopened.
12. May participate in social, religious and community activities.
13. May retain and use his personal clothing and possessions as space permits.

14. If married, is assured privacy for visits with his/her spouse. If both are inpatients they are permitted to share a room.

All rights and responsibilities specified here are transferred to the next of kin if the patient is judged incapable of understanding these rights.

Where do I report issues or problems?

Ombudsman

An ombudsman is an advocate for residents of nursing homes, board and care homes, and assisted living.

In order to foster a more sympathetic understanding of the problems of persons in residential health care facilities and to improve their quality of life, an Ombudsman program is sponsored by the Westchester County Department of Senior Programs and Services and administered by the Westchester Mental Health Association. Trained volunteers have access to all facilities, lend an ear to patients and staff, observe needs, help patients and manage and try to create a better atmosphere.

For further information, call: (914) 682-3926 ext. 2121 or visit www.ltcombudsman.ny.gov/

To learn more about adult care facilities you can also visit www.health.state.ny.us/facilities/adult_care/

Nursing Home Complaint Helpline (1-888-201-4563) can be called 24 hours per day, seven days per week. The Helpline is manned by Division of Residential Services (DRS) staff from 8:30 a.m. to 4:45p.m. Monday-Friday. A voice message may be left during non-business hours.

ADULT HOMES

For adults of all ages who need supervised residential care due to the inability to live independently but do not require medical care. Room and board, 24-hour supervision, housekeeping, some personal care and activities are provided. It is important to note that there are broad variations in atmosphere and services within this category of homes due to sponsorship, administration and the character of the resident population. Adult Homes are licensed by NYS Department of Health and must meet certain requirements. Great care must be taken to visit and inspect an adult home before selection is made, as they vary from small family-type residences to larger more institutional-looking establishments. Some are connected with other facilities, simplifying transfer as the need for medical and nursing care arises.

Retirement Residence

Not regulated by New York State, Retirement Residences are multi-unit housing facilities that are planned, designed and managed to provide for the housing needs of older persons who are active, able to live independently and in good health. Some facilities may provide limited medical access; some provide the services of an on-site service coordinator who arranges personal care services for residents with outside medical providers, while others provide on-site home health care services.

Assisted Living

Assisted Living residences may be free standing or housed with other residential options, such as a Retirement Residence or Residential Care Facility (Nursing Home). Licensed by NYS Department of Social Services and the Department of Health, Assisted Living Program was designed to provide an alternative to placement in a nursing home for those not needing intensive medical care or supervision. The facility is responsible for providing or arranging for resident services that include housekeeping, supervision, personal care, case management and limited health services.
